

This is how you choose the right crypto exchange for you

Just as you have chosen your bank, it is important that you also choose one or more crypto exchanges that suit you.

The following criteria should help you in your decision:

1. Based in Europe / US or offshore

Do you prefer an exchange in Europe / US or offshore location like caribbean sea. Europe and US are more regulated but stand for trust.

2. Coin selection

Each crypto exchange offers a different number of coins. Here you have to see how much and which coins you want to buy. You can also open accounts with multiple exchanges. While some exchanges only offer 10 products, others have 500.

3. Product Selection

There are countless products in the crypto sector. Each exchange offers different products - some more, others less.

Before opening an account, take a look at which products you would like to use and whether they are also offered on the exchange of your choice.

4. Ease of use

Look at how well you can handle the operation of the exchange. There are beginner-friendly exchanges and there are exchanges for advanced traders

5. Costs and Rewards

The range should not be underestimated. Transaction costs vary depending on the exchange, but so do the rewards. Just as you have different conditions for interest and fees with banks, it is also the case in the crypto area
